

Index to Volume 71, 1985

Alfred, Richard and John M. Hilpert, The Liberal Arts and the Personnel Needs of Complex Organizations, 27.

Arons, Arnold B., "Critical Thinking" in the Baccalaureate Curriculum, 141.

Baron, Naomi S., Humanists Among the CRTs: The Problem of Method in the Humanities, 251.

Benezet, Louis T., Undergraduate Departments, General Education, and Liberal Learning, 321.

Berkin, Carol, Clio in Search of Her Daughters/Women in Search of Their Past, 205.

Berte, Neal R. and Stewart A. Jackson, A Systemic Approach to a Liberal Arts College, 85.

Bevan, John M., The Immediate Usefulness of Liberal Arts: Variations on a Theme, 49.

Bruffee, Kenneth A., Liberal Education, Scholarly Community, and the Authority of Knowledge, 231.

Carter, Jack L., Internationalizing the Curriculum in the Natural Sciences, 121.

Coburn, Thomas B., Nattering Nabobs, Habits of Mind, Persons in Relations: The Future of Liberal Arts Education in a Specialized Society, 1.

Conrad, Thomas R., Habits of the Heart and the Small College: A Review Essay, 351.

Corder, Jim W., The Time the Cavalry Didn't Come, or the Quest for a Saving Authority in Recent Studies of Higher Education, 305.

Cox, Harvey G., Moral Reasoning and the Humanities, 195.

Doeringer, Franklin M., International Perspectives On Campus, 127.

Ekman, Richard, The Feasibility of Higher Education Reform in the Humanities, 273.

Georgia, Robert T., Cultural "Dark Ages": Then and Now, 81.

Hatcher, Donald, The Failure of the Humanities in a Technological World, 265.

Hayford, Elizabeth R., Introduction, 93.

Hiley, David and William Layton, What Is a Corporate Executive Like You Doing in a Philosophy Class Like This? 77.

Jones, Thomas B., Liberal Learning and Business Study, 61.

Katz, Joseph, Rethinking Teaching from the Humanist's Perspective, 241.

Klein, Thomas, What One Academic Department in a University Learned from General Education Reform, 327.

Koch, James V., The Market for College Graduates: Current Myths and Emerging Realities, 39.

Lipman-Blumen, Jean, The Creative Tension Between Liberal Arts and Specialization, 17.

Lipschutz, Susan S., Academic Freedom: The Faculty's Special Responsibility, 283.

March, Tamar, Academic Culture: Reformation, Deformation, and Change, 175.

Newton, Nancy, Letter to a Search and Screen Committee for a Dean of Liberal Arts, 295.

Nichols, Robert L., How Can One Know America, Who Only America Knows? 109.

Overvold, Gary E., The Humanities and the Human Sciences, 183.

Plante, Patricia R., Of Course, Johnny Can't Read, 159.

Pinch, Judith L., Preface, 173.

Sabin, Margery, Is There a Class for This Text? 217.

Stauffer, Thomas M., Uncapping the Retirement Age in Higher Education, 289.

Stevens, Robert, Restructuring the Liberal Arts: Synthesis Rather Than Fragmentation, 163.

Sutton, Francis X., Summary Remarks, 135.

Valley, Philip J., OSB, Aesthetic Education: Its Status in General Education and a Justification for its Existence as a Required Program, 341.

Vulgamore, Melvin L., The Rhetoric of Being and Becoming, 167.

Waters, Gregory L., Implementing General Education, 335.

Wirtz, Willard, Robots, Computers, and Liberal Education, 13.

Wong, Frank F., Pilgrims and Immigrants: Liberal Learning in Today's World, 97.